"Happy Days": Where Are They Now?

Tags: Where Are They Now?

"Sunday, Monday, Happy Days. Tuesday, Wednesday, Happy Days. Thursday, Friday, Happy Days! The weekend comes, my cycle hums, ready to race to you ..."

We know that after you read those opening lyrics to the "Happy Days" theme song, you're never getting them out of your head. But that's a good thing -- because with this "Where Are They Now?" slideshow, we're talking about Milwaukee's best here. The Cunninghams. Potsie and Ralph. And the Fonz ... The coolest guy in town, a total chick magnet, and able to turn anything on with only the light touch of his fist.

"Happy Days" premiered in 1974 and was actually a spin-off of the comedy anthology series "Love American Style." It hit the airwaves during a dour time in America when Vietnam and Watergate were in the headlines and TV viewers were looking for an escape -- and an idealized 1950s household seemed like the perfect setting. On the heels of the box office success of '50s-themed "American Graffiti," "Happy Days" was an immediate hit after it premiered on ABC -- and shortly thereafter, its characters joined the lexicon of the TV beloved.

It also spawned future Hollywood mogul Ron Howard and no less than three spin-offs: "Laverne & Shirley," "Mork & Mindy," and "Joanie Loves Chachi." When it left the airwaves in 1984, in a finale seen by millions, it left a gap in the TV landscape ... but plenty of endearing memories remain.

So don't "Sit on it" -- relive those "Happy Days," right here!

Weekly Crush: The "Lost" Men

"Please join me in admiring my flowing locks."

Tags: Lost

Some women would say that really, most men are "Lost." These particular guys, however, have a good excuse.

They've been stranded on an island (you try keeping your sanity on a diet of mangos and grubs!), have been put through the time-travel ringer, and let's not forget those "Others" issues. Some have even endured a plane crash -- twice!

But even after all of that, they've managed to stick together, protect those they love, and -- at times -- totally confuse us. Isn't that what a great relationship is all about?

Kirsten Storms of "General Hospital" was born in Orlando, Florida.

SOAPnet is bringing its own Southern grace and hospitality with the premiere of "Southern Belles: Louisville," tomorrow at 10PM/9c. But before Emily, Hadley, Julie, Kellie, and Shea prove to us that the South will rise again (with style and panache!), let's take a look at the some amazing women who continue to pave the way for successful ladies everywhere -- whether your geography is Southern or not.

"Yup, I did soaps ... before I got lovably strange."

"Guiding Light" may have been cancelled (although Lifetime may be our "Light" in shining armor) -- but we've got all those Springfield memories to pull us through the grief. And since it's not leaving us until September, we have time to reminisce about where our love affair with the show began.

Of course, any affinity to a beloved series begins with its characters -- and the actors who've graced their personas. "Guiding Light"'s been on for decades, so it's no shock to see such a long and distinguished list of alumni. Some are currently on your favorite primetime dramas. There are plenty of surprises too; who knew Darth Vader once played a doctor? And Christopher Walken? Really?

Springfield is a town on the edge of fashion. Sure, it has a history of infidelity, murder, kidnapping, and black-market baby purchases, but it's also constantly evolving into a place of style innovation and wardrobe risks us normal folk would blush at. In tribute to this spirit of trendy endeavor, we decided to collect a look book of what the residents of Springfield are wearing and conniving in.

We hope to update our Springfield look book on a regular basis with "Guiding Light" glamour that spawns both envy and admiration. Give us a holler with any suggestions you may have.

Beth Raines (Beth Chamberlin)

You can see why Beth has had her share of Spaulding men: her smile is infectious, and the way she carries a simple white outfit with only a shawl as accent screams confidence.

Beth is all business here, with iPhone at the ready – even if her sexy spring green dress is saying otherwise.

We love how those doves on Daisy's T-shirt surround the universal symbol for peace. She even managed to accessorize without irony by adding a handgun and pointing it at someone.

When she's done hitting the books and it's time to get a little sassy, it's sexy glamour for Christina – who also lets her hair down for a night on the town.

Remy carries this leather bomber jacket with the confidence of someone who's seen the dark side of Springfield (well, really, who in the town hasn't?) but hasn't forgotten how to look hip.

On the swing set with Bill, Lizzie covers up her blonde with a cute beret that splashes some red onto her winter outfit. Don't push too hard, Bill -- we'd hate to see all that adorable get dirty!

Springfield Mardi Gras

"I don't think we'll have any problem blending into a crowd with these outfits ..."

The cast of "Guiding Light" was at Universal Studios Orlando recently to shoot some episodes on location. Oh sure, that was the excuse they gave us -- but we know the real reason they went to Florida ... to be in the world-famous Universal Mardi Gras Parade!

We totally understand the allure of riding on floats, tossing beads to onlookers, and having any excuse to wear flamboyant costumes and act goofy ... so we can't blame them. It certainly looks like they had a great time, and we have to say -- they pull off those zany costumes well!

Jeff Branson is our favorite new addition to the "GL" cast. All these crowns make us think of Burger King and how much we want a Whopper.

Robert and Kim as King and Queen. Which, obviously, they should be. We feel this look is very George Clinton's Parliament Funkadelic reunion. We wonder if these two can play a mean bass.

The King and Queen cruise on their float, careful not to run over their subjects. When you think about it, the only thing Josh and Reva haven't been through is a Mardi Gras storyline.
